ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention is a method and machine readable medium for determining optimal values of design parameters of a subsystem to meet design constraints. The subsystem comprises a plurality of circuits. Parameter functions are created for the corresponding circuits. The parameter functions represent a relationship among the design parameters. The design parameters are optimized based on the parameter functions to satisfy the design constraints.